Macintosh: Licensing the ImageWriter Driver Source Code

===

This article last reviewed: 26 September 1989

The ImageWriter source code has been made available to developers in order to encourage development and support of complementary products for the Macintosh. Note that the source code will be distributed on an "as is" basis: Apple will NOT be providing technical support for it.

To receive the code, you must submit a one page proposal that describes why you need the software. This proposal must be approved before Apple can grant a license. Upon approval, you will be sent a software license agreement. You must pay a one-time licensing fee to receive the source code.

To license the source code, contact Apple Software Licensing. Search on Software Licensing for address information.
