TOPIC -----

Under System 6, I've used Suitcase and Master Juggler, so my fonts don't take up space in my System file. Do I need these products with System 7?

DISCUSSION -----

Before System 7, Macintosh System software limited the number of fonts you could have in the System file. With System 7, that limit is so much greater that you can, for all practical purposes, disregard it. You may still want to use programs like Suitcase and Master Juggler to organize sets of fonts that you don't need access to all the time. Keep in mind also that one TrueType file, which can produce all point sizes in that font, takes up much less space in your system than the files for the equivalent bitmap fonts.
