TOPIC -----

I want to generate the "propeller" character on my keyboard, but it's produced with the Control-Q key combination, and my Macintosh Plus has no Control key. Is there another way to generate that character directly on the Macintosh Plus?

DISCUSSION -----

We checked through the character sets of all of our fonts and found that symbol only in Chicago under Control-Q. Short of re-defining a font in ResEdit or buying a font-creation product, you can type the character on another Macintosh and save the character in a document that you can transfer (by disk or modem) to your computer. Then, copy the character and paste it into your document.
