

Tech Info Library

Forwarded Mail: Appears to Lose Enclosures (10/93)

Revised: 10/5/93
Security: Everyone

Forwarded Mail: Appears to Lose Enclosures (10/93)

=====

Article Created: 4 October 1993

TOPIC -----

Mail forwarded from within an application, like AppleMail, may appear to lose enclosures when the recipient opens the document. A paper clip may appear in the upper right corner of the standard mail, while the enclosure window displays nothing.

DISCUSSION -----

Actually the enclosure is in the mail, though in a different layer. By clicking the turned edge at the bottom left corner of the standard mailer, you can find enclosures in the original addresses mailer.

Also, a popup menu (triangle) appears to the right of the "From" field. This popup menu lists names of all forwarding individuals. A paper clip may appear beside some names in the popup menu indicating an enclosure. Selecting names from the popup menu allows instant access to the standard mailer page addresses.

Copyright 1993, Apple Computer, Inc.

Tech Info Library Article Number:13600